

Supporting your daughter to successfully navigate Girl World.

Seminar for parents and educators

Research tells us that friends are more important to teenage girls than even their parents or teachers. How do we best support our daughters to make friends? How do we help our daughters decide if a friendship is helping or harming them? How can we support our girls when they are caught up in girl-world drama or the victim of "Mean Girl" style bullying? This parent workshop will address these issues and equip parents and educators to support their girls to develop the necessary skills they need to make safe, important decisions about their friendships.

What does this workshop cover?

- How to help your daughter make new friends.
- How to support your daughter to resolve conflict respectfully.
- Cyber world - communication essentials.
- What to do when things go wrong: how to know if your child is being bullied and what to do about it.

Praise for "The Butterfly Effect"

- Random House, 2009

"If you want to develop a deeply connected and loving relationship with your teenage daughter, then this book is for you. This is a time when many girls struggle to cope and really need our guidance and support, even though they may not be asking for it! The Butterfly Effect is written with passion and honesty, and offers insightful and practical advice for all parents who want to do more than 'just survive' the teen years!"

- Julie Gale, Founder and Director, Kids Free 2B Kids

"A lively, informative and engaging book filled with great advice and resources for both mothers and daughters."

- Jean Kilbourne, creator of 'Killing Us Softly: Advertising's Images of Women' film series

"Everyone who loves a young girl must read The Butterfly Effect. Dannielle brilliantly takes the mystery and fear out of raising girls growing up in a culture which doesn't like them very much."

- Meg Meeker, M.D., best-selling author of 'Strong Fathers, Strong Daughters: Ten Secrets Every Father Must Know.'

Preliminary praise for Dannielle's second book, "The Girl With The Butterfly Tattoo" (to be released by Random House, April 2012):

"Danni Miller is the big sister every teenage girl needs, offering the perfect mix of resolve-stiffening encouragement, soul-touching inspiration and real-world practical advice."

- Emily Maguire, author of 'Princesses and Porn Stars' and 'Your Skirt's Too Short.'

Workshop Testimonials

"Dannielle Miller is not the first person to call attention to these issues, to the phenomenon of girls' lives sometimes falling apart at the very threshold of womanhood... But she offers not only insight into adolescent girls as interesting works in progress, but also provides encouragement, solace and solution."

- Clinical Professor David Bennett AO FRACP FSAM

"Danni's (or Gorgeous as known by the girls) presentation on 'friendships' was the second presentation she has delivered to our community and was engaging, interactive, insightful and practical. Her comment "girls can't be what they can't see" was a gentle reminder about the language we use to describe ourselves around the girls, as parents and as educators. Her 10 step guide on conflict resolution was very useful and valuable. Danni's energy, passion and flair is infectious and has a profound and lasting effect on both our girls and our parent community."

- Briony Trotter, Head of Marketing & Community Relations, Wilderness School, Adelaide.

"Dannielle, you are a special ambassador for our girls and a warm and engaging speaker."

- Karen Christie, President, Federation of Parents and Friends Associations, Dioceses of Maitland-Newcastle

"You share stories of hope, sadness and joy all wrapped up to deliver a message that girls need the women in their lives to step up as their role models, to talk to girls about the false image of women that is presented to them in media, to know that they are loved and valued as young women, that they can achieve anything they set their mind to."

- Neville Dwyer, Griffith Connections
